A REAL PLACE FOR CHILDREN'S IDEAS

A LETTER FROM MELITA

My name is Melita Iosava. I am 12 years old. When I was nine, I asked my mother to make one of my drawings real for my birthday. That small request became the beginning of Children's Park of Imagination.

I believe children's drawings should not disappear in drawers. They can become sculptures, places, furniture, lights, gardens and even architecture. When adults take a child's idea seriously, the child also learns to take imagination seriously.

I would be very happy if one day this idea could grow in Shanghai into a permanent museum and park - a place made with children, not only for them. Children from Shanghai could add their own drawings, stories and impossible creatures, so the collection would keep changing as new children arrive.

I hope this can become a place where children feel that their ideas matter, and where adults remember how large imagination can be.

THE PROJECT

A LIVING MUSEUM AND PUBLIC PARK FOUNDED ON THE TRANSFORMATION OF CHILDREN'S DRAWINGS

Children's Park of Imagination begins with the simplest possible source: a child's drawing. The line is not corrected, beautified or translated into an adult idea of what art should be. Its strange proportions, impossible anatomy, humor, fear, aggression, tenderness and freedom are treated as an artistic language in their own right.

The drawing becomes sculpture. The sculpture becomes an object in the museum. Selected works are then enlarged into monumental public art and placed in the landscape. In this way, something usually kept on a refrigerator door or forgotten in a drawer is given the scale, material seriousness and cultural attention normally reserved for established art.

THE CHILD'S LINE IS THE ORIGINAL.

The project does not imitate childhood. It gives childhood authorship.

FROM DRAWING TO PUBLIC ART

01 ORIGINAL DRAWING

The child's visual logic remains the source.

02 SCULPTURAL READING

The form is translated without correcting its imagination.

03 PAPIER-MACHE MAQUETTE

The first physical work preserves the drawing's character.

04 ENGINEERING

Selected forms are scaled for structure, safety and climate.

05 PUBLIC ART

The child's line enters the city at architectural scale.

A MUSEUM THAT DOES NOT FINISH

New drawings enter the archive continuously. Each carries a child's name, story and moment in time. Some remain drawings; some become museum sculptures; a smaller number become future monumental works in the park.

The archive is therefore the engine of the institution. The project grows with children rather than freezing childhood into a single exhibition.

ONE PROJECT. ONE LIVING CULTURAL ECOSYSTEM.

PUBLIC PARK

Art, water, gardens and movement in one welcoming landscape.

MUSEUM

The permanent collection and the place where drawing meets sculpture.

LIVING ARCHIVE

New drawings continually renew the institution.

WONDER CAFE

Functional art extends the museum into everyday life.

SOUVENIR SHOP

Objects, editions and books extend the collection beyond the visit.

WORKSHOPS + EDUCATION

Children participate as contributors, not only as visitors.

THE SMALL BODY. THE LARGE IMAGINATION.

A child does not begin by asking whether an idea is correct, tasteful, useful or possible. The child sees before convention edits the image. That unfiltered perception is not a lesser form of art. It is the source condition of art.

Growing up enlarges the body, but it can reduce the radius of imagination. This project reverses that hierarchy: the child's line becomes monumental; the adult enters it at architectural scale.

This is not a museum that sentimentalises innocence. Children contain tenderness, cruelty, jealousy, fear, humour, chaos and wonder. What makes their work radical is not purity - it is directness.

A CHILD'S DRAWING BECOMES SERIOUS ART.

VALUE FROM WHAT WAS DISCARDED.

Papier-mache and reused papers turn material transformation into part of the cultural message.

Museum-scale works can begin with recycled paper, discarded packaging and selected art papers. Visible colour and surface identity come from the papers themselves rather than paint.

DISCARDED PAPER -> ART

DISMISSED DRAWING -> CULTURAL VALUE

The environmental lesson is experienced through transformation, not delivered as a slogan.

REALIZATION

FROM ARTISTIC IDEA TO PERMANENT PLACE

CURATORIAL SYSTEM

Children's drawings are collected and selected for originality of perception rather than conventional skill.

MUSEUM PRODUCTION

Papier-mache works, drawings, documentation and archive form the first permanent collection.

PUBLIC ART ENGINEERING

Selected forms are scaled and engineered for Shanghai's climate and public safety requirements.

LOCAL FABRICATION

Architects, landscape designers, engineers and fabricators develop the site under artistic direction.

LIGHT & LANDSCAPE

Night identity is integrated into works, paths, water and vegetation without turning the park into spectacle.

LONG-TERM GROWTH

New drawings and commissions periodically expand both museum and park.

A MUSEUM FOR THE PART OF US THAT DID NOT GROW UP

Children's Park of Imagination is not an argument that every childhood drawing is a masterpiece. It is an argument that the freedom from which art is born appears naturally before we learn to censor it.

The project gives that freedom architecture, material, archive, landscape and public scale. It turns children's drawings into serious objects not to imitate the art world, but to question one of its oldest habits: the belief that artistic authority must arrive only after training, adulthood and permission.

THE SMALL CHILD CAN BE THE LARGE CREATOR.
THE ADULT MAY NEED TO LEARN TO SEE AGAIN.

A PROPOSAL FOR CONSIDERATION

A proposal to explore how Children's Park of Imagination could develop in Shanghai as a locally engineered cultural destination - a museum, living archive and public park built from children's visual imagination.
