

MERANI

SCULPTURAL COLLABORATION PROPOSAL

EVERY GREAT DESIGN BEGINS WITH AN EMOTION.

MERANI was born from the meeting of two worlds. One is the timeless language of Ferrari design - where engineering becomes sculpture and movement becomes beauty. The other begins with Georgian Romanticism and Nikoloz Baratashvili's poem "Merani," in which the horse becomes an image of freedom, sacrifice and the courage to open an untrodden path for those who follow.

Rather than designing an object that imitates an automobile, I wanted to create a sculpture that expresses movement itself.

MERANI IS NOT A HORSE. It is the idea of moving forward. It is the moment before speed. It is courage transformed into form.

MERANI - FRONTAL TRANSLATION

The sculptural language of MERANI was inspired by the Ferrari 250 Testa Rossa and by Sergio Scaglietti's ability to transform engineering into emotional form. The dialogue is most visible in the frontal architecture: a central intake and two lateral lighting elements, translated into an independent sculptural language.

NOT AN IMITATION. A TRANSLATION OF EMOTION, MOTION AND PROPORTION.

THE SPIRIT OF MERANI

NIKOLOZ BARATASHVILI (1817-1845) · GEORGIAN ROMANTIC POET

At the heart of MERANI is Baratashvili's poem "Merani" - a major work of Georgian Romanticism whose philosophical and artistic power remains far less familiar to international audiences than it deserves.

"The yearnings of my restless soul will not in vain have glowed,
For, dashing on, my steed has paved a new untrodden road.
He who follows in our wake, a smoother path will find;
Daring all, his fateful steed shall leave dark fate behind."

- Nikoloz Baratashvili, "Merani" · English translation: Venera Urushadze

THE SCULPTURAL IDEA

Every line of MERANI is designed to communicate motion. The body does not imitate anatomy. Its open volumes, long neck, heart-like leg rhythm and continuous rear curve create an emotional geometry. The full-scale version preserves these defining proportions rather than converting the work into a conventional horse.

PROPOSED FULL-SCALE SHOWROOM SCULPTURE

A monumental Ferrari-red object conceived at approximately real-horse scale, without the original model's hand support.

A PRESENCE TO BE ENCOUNTERED - NOT A DECORATIVE OBJECT.

LIGHT AS PART OF THE SCULPTURE

The two frontal lighting elements are conceived as functional sculptural details inspired by the Ferrari 250 Testa Rossa. In a potential collaboration with Ferrari, final engineering could explore authentic Ferrari components, where technically and historically appropriate, or specially developed lighting elements created for MERANI.

WHEN ILLUMINATED, THE AUTOMOTIVE REFERENCE BECOMES ACTIVE - NOT ILLUSTRATIVE.

MATERIALS, FINISH & COLLABORATION

The full-scale work is proposed as a high-gloss Ferrari-red sculptural object. Final material, internal structure, surface system, lighting integration and engineering should be developed together with the appropriate Ferrari design and engineering teams. The artistic authorship remains centered on the defining silhouette, open volumes, frontal intake language, light placement and continuous movement of the form.

THE UNTRODDEN ROAD

Baratashvili's rider accepts uncertainty and sacrifice in order to cross a path that does not yet exist. The value of the journey lies not only in personal freedom, but in the possibility that the path left behind may become easier for someone who follows.

MERANI

TWO ERAS. ONE SYMBOL.

Nearly two centuries later, MERANI asks what the horse can mean in the contemporary world. Freedom, speed, aspiration, achievement, beauty and status now coexist within the same symbol. The sculpture places a Romantic ideal beside a modern icon and leaves the question open: what kind of trace do we choose to leave behind today?

MERANI

FROM HANDMADE WORK TO CONTEMPORARY DIALOGUE

The original MERANI was sculpted by hand in papier-mache. The proposed full-scale work preserves its defining silhouette, open volumes and emotional geometry while inviting a new dialogue with Ferrari's language of movement and design. It is not an artwork about Ferrari alone; it is a conversation between two eras, conducted through the image of the horse.
